“June statistics show a continued growth in the market and reflect numbers closer to the 2008 home sales numbers that we have seen in the past. While most Realtors are optimistic that the market is improving, we are also cautious as we wait to see what the market will do with the end of the Home Buyers Tax Credit at the end of June. The increased sales and higher sale prices are indications of some increased activity in the higher price ranges. Sales have been up every month this year so far and the median sales price of homes continues to rise each month, which is positive for everyone in the real estate market” said Karen Baker, 2010 WCAR President.
